The Shapiro Campus Center clearly appears to be fulfilling its mandate to serve not merely as the geographic but also the functional and perceptual heart of campus. On a recent visit, the place was bustling: The library was standing room only; the atrium was hosting a poster sale; the café was packed. Administrators and students enthusiastically described how much they liked the building and how well it accommodated activities ranging from peer counseling to tango lessons. And one junior was especially effusive: ‘I practically live in this building,’ she said. Brandeis and its architect have given her a great place to live in.”

Nancy Levinson, Architectural Record, 2004

Awards:

Boston Society of Architects Higher Education Facilities Design Award
Boston Society of Architects Design Honor Award
American Architecture Award, The Chicago Athenaeum
Tucker Award of Excellence, Building Stone Institute

Select Publications:

“Collegiate Construction: Colleges and Universities Continue to Expand Despite Tight Budgets,” Metalmag, February 2005.

